Betsy McGovern

“A Washington native now spreading the Celtic gospel in Louisiana, Betsy McGovern’s voice can chill as easily as it caresses. Therefore she handles up-tempo songs with relish. The slower songs she invests with a quiet authority, and they in turn become things of shimmering beauty. A wondrous voice of pure and untarnished beauty, she is capable of moving mountains with a voice like this.” So says Rock and Reel magazine of Betsy McGovern. As a solo artist and along with her band, The Poor Clares, she has been featured in prestigious venues around the country, including the Milwaukee Irish Fest (the largest Irish music festival in the world), Festival Internationale, The Baton Rouge Pops Symphony, The National Geographic Society Concerts in Washington, DC, and the New Orleans Jazz Fest.

The TANGLERS

This six-piece acoustic ensemble brings a unique brand of music to the Gulf South music scene. Rooted in traditional and bluegrass music, the Tanglers weave a high-energy and entertaining musical experience. Hailing from uptown New Orleans, they draw from myriad influences, from Monroe to Marley to the Meters. Their funky interpretation of traditional and not-so-traditional melodies lends itself to kickin’ it at a festival or dancin’ the night away in a smoke-filled club, either way, the Tanglers are guaranteed to deliver.

A sincere thank you to the following people: All the UNO singers for working so hard!, Dr. Kelly & Maja Bahat, Dr. Jim Hammann, and Candice Holley for her work with the dancers.
